HOME HEALTH: PHYLLIS' STORY

Phyllis is an active and well-known member of the Craig community. At 88 years old, she lives independently in her home and has regularly participated in activities and events at the Senior Social Center, Northwest Colorado Health's Aging Well Program, and as a volunteer at the local museum.

Recently, she became ill with pneumonia and had to spend 10 days in the hospital due to her condition. Her family was not sure she would be able to recover successfully at home, and wrestled with the idea of having her admitted into long-term care. However, they decided to give Home Health a chance since many of Phyllis's interests and activities would be impossible to continue in long-term care after her recovery.

Today, Phyllis is healthy and independent again. Our Home Health team continues to support Phyllis with medication management, and in-home assistance with non-medical tasks ensuring her basic needs are met and she can remain independent in her home as long as possible.
